

Another Award-Winning Beaver Mountain Log Home!

Log Home Living, a magazine devoted to log homes, conducted a vote by their log home enthusiast readers to select the top homes of 2018. Selecting from dozens of homes, the voters selected the “Mountainview” as one of the Best Homes of 2018 and it will be featured in their Best Log and Timber Homes special issue.

Fred and Carol started with some acreage and a dream. They wanted a property that was horse friendly, casual but still well designed to accommodate their wide circle of family and friends who visit. They started with a concept and looked to the design team at Beaver Mountain to bring their dream to fruition.

“Mountainview” is a timeless and exactly what they wanted their log cabin to be. Carol added, “The quality was there. You get what you pay for and we wound up with a good deal when we chose Beaver Mountain.”

They hired Todd Stinson, owner of Cedarcrest Builders, to build the home. He had worked with Beaver Mountain in the past and was pleased to be chosen to do the construction. Todd was comfortable

John Lanner, a senior design team member at Beaver Mountain, visited their building site to get a better idea of how the home should be designed. The land had a pond and a beautiful view of the purple mountains, which they wanted to take advantage of. John worked with them on floor plans that would give them the open feel that they wanted as well as the master suite on the main floor. Fred and Carol had some basic design ideas that they asked to be worked into the plans - including a cathedral ceiling in the entry, a first floor master bedroom and a few bedrooms and bathrooms upstairs. As he got to know the couple, he developed a sense of what they wanted and after a few tweaks he gave them a layout that checked off everything on their wish-list.

Fred and Carol are rather unique, because they have experienced the perfect build after enduring a poor experience with another company. After that experience they sold that home and started looking for a company they could trust. Fred saw a cabin in Fleischmans, NY under construction and he knew it was exactly what he wanted. He stopped and talked to the builder. The cabin was a Beaver Mountain home and as Fred walked around he was convinced. Beaver Mountain was the company he wanted to work with. The design of Fred and Carol’s and confident with the product quality and customer service. He stated, “If there is a problem or a last minute change, everyone at Beaver Mountain is there to handle it”

Fred and Carol are incredibly pleased with their home and enjoy the opportunity to show it off. They got to lay the stonewall terrace that creates a frame for the house and will plant numerous flowers in the spring. The remnants of an old foundation on the property were re-purposed to build the wall. Fred knew that the wall would help showcase the home.

“They listened,” became the mantra for the build.
